2. OBJECTIVES AND LEARNING OUTCOMES

Objectives

The aim of the subject is to develop students' reading skills so that they can read texts with greater awareness, and to develop complex and sophisticated oral communication. In addition, an important aim is to activate the students' economic background knowledge and develop their professional economic vocabulary.

Academic results

Knowledge

1. The students are familiar with different reading strategies, techniques and methods for reading professional texts.
2. They reflect on the reading strategies they have used so far.
3. The students know techniques for collecting, organising and presenting information.

Skills

1. They are able to select and apply reading strategies appropriate to the type of text and the purpose of reading.
2. They are able to read more demanding professional texts with comprehension.
3. They can discuss macroeconomic issues in a sophisticated professional manner.
4. They are able to deal with some more demanding oral communication situations, e.g. summarising, reasoning, expressing a point of view, making a suggestion, giving feedback,
5. They can reflect on current economic developments.
6. They can use their economic background to interpret economic processes and draw conclusions.
7. They are able to select and apply information gathering and organising strategies (best suited to their purposes).

Attitude

1. The students are actively involved in the process of the texts and the discussion thereof.
2. They are open to and interested in economic developments and current affairs.
3. They are constantly expanding their professional vocabulary.

Independence and responsibility

1. They have the appropriate strategies to be able to find out about macroeconomic issues independently and to gather information.
2. They take responsibility for the continuous maintenance and improvement of their language competence.

Teaching methodology

During the learning process students often work in pairs or groups to give them more opportunity to practice their speaking skills.
