2. OBJECTIVES AND LEARNING OUTCOMES

Objectives

The aim of International Communication course is to give students a holistic, interdisciplinary and systematic view on today's globalized world in order to be well educated, competent communication experts on international level. As with globalization international relations became more integrated, inter-cultural communication opportunities more frequent in all fields of our life, ranging from economy – e.g. in multinational corporations, tourism –, international politics – e.g. international organizations (UN, EU) or non-governmental organization (NGOs) –, through science, culture, sport (e.g. cultural or sport diplomacy) to education (e.g. Erasmus).

Academic results

Knowledge

1. Basic theoretical knowledge of international relations, international business, cross-cultural communication and organizational culture
2. Solid knowledge of the most important social science conceptualizations needed to study the communication phenomena.

Skills

1. To have a holistic, systematic and interdisciplinary world view, capable to understand the inter-relation between various fields of social sciences (economics, management, international politics, diplomacy, organizational culture, cross-cultural communication etc...).
2. Openness to acquire new sectors of knowledge and ability to effectively acquire them.

Attitude

1. Acceptance of one's own (Western) cultural traditions
2. Acceptance of other (non-Western) cultural traditions

Independence and responsibility

1. Proficiency in professional communication both in oral and written form
2. Independent and responsible theoretical and empirical work

Teaching methodology

To be a successful international communicator to lay down the interdisciplinary theoretical basis is essential in the form of lectures in various fields such as economics, international political economy, diplomacy, international business communication and cross-cultural management. Then in the practice part international communication skills are developed both in the form of individual and team tasks, creative gamification as well as relying on the background knowledge of the international student body. The language of instruction is English, so a reliable CEFR B2 level command of English is a requirement. It is advised a previous or parallel attendance of the economics, management and social theory courses of the program.
